Do you want to write the perfect Script for your Productions?

Not sure how to do it?

Then come along to this talk to find out

Richard first became interested in photography as a schoolboy, starting with a Box Brownie camera and doing developing and contact printing. A friend persuaded him to attend an exhibition at Fentham Photographic Society in Birmingham, which he immediately joined and of which he is still an active member.

Richard's own work has spanned a wide variety of genres. Initially interested in music interpretation, he then moved mainly into biographies and historical documentaries, but always with occasional forays into humour.

He has won many prizes in competitions and festivals over the years, including the Grand Prix and Gold Medal at the RPS International Festival in September 2018

Richard will start the evening with practical advice and ideas on improving your scriptwriting, illustrated with sound clips of how and how not to do it!

In the second half he will compare and contrast two of his newer productions 'It All Adds Up' and 'In Search of Christina'. Two shows on a similar theme but with different script treatments.

This promises to be an interesting, enjoyable and educational evening and one not to be missed.
